Introduction

This guide is for people facing deportation due to a California state conviction.¹ Pardons have historically been rare. From 1991 to 2010, California governors granted a total of just 28 pardons. In recent years, California has lead the way in the use of pardons and commutations to address mass incarceration and deportation with over a thousand pardons granted so far. In 2018, California passed AB 2845 providing the first reforms to the pardon process in decades and making the process easier to navigate. Governor Gavin Newsom has indicated a continued desire to address mass incarceration and deportation. In hopes that Governor Newsom will pardon many more people by the end of his term, and that the next Governor will continue on this path, we offer this guidance for people applying for pardons in California. Since the pardon application process can be challenging, we want to support people in submitting as strong an application as possible as we continue to organize to restore people’s rights and to allow immigrants to seek relief from deportation.

We would appreciate any additional information from applicants and advocates about their experiences with this process. We invite you to contact Advancing Justice – Asian Law Caucus if you would like to provide feedback.

Please share the guide as a resource to support people who have served time in prison, immigrants with conviction(s) facing deportation, and families helping their loved ones seek relief through a pardon.

The material included is for informational purposes only and not for the purpose of providing legal advice.

Note to attorneys: We urge attorneys to support pardon applications pro bono (free of charge). Please do not charge individuals for the information gathered and shared here. This guide is intended to redistribute resources and increase access to relief.

Acknowledgments

We thank the California Coalition for Women Prisoners for their commutation application guide, which we significantly drew upon to compile this pardon guide.

¹ Pardons may not fully resolve your immigration case if you did not previously have legal status or were ordered removed for certain convictions including drug trafficking, firearms, and domestic violence. You should consult with an attorney to see if a pardon would help in your situation. California has a number of clean slate vehicles that can also provide immigration relief and may be a better option for you.

What is a pardon?

A pardon restores rights, such as the ability to obtain a professional license, and allows for immigrants, in some cases, to reopen their deportation cases.

Many immigrants are ordered deported based on an underlying conviction. Consequently, immigrants with convictions, including very old convictions, live with the threat of deportation from the United States. Immigrants facing deportation in the near future may be able to seek a pardon to eliminate the immigration consequences of their conviction.

Who can apply for a pardon?

Generally, anyone with a California state conviction can request a pardon from the Governor. As explained below, the process of applying for a pardon may vary depending on your situation and criminal history. The Governor cannot pardon federal convictions or convictions from other states.

Applicants do not need an attorney to apply for pardon. Some applicants do work with attorneys, but it is not required.

I previously applied for a pardon. Do I need to submit a new application?

It depends on when you submitted the application. If you submitted a pardon application before January 2019 to a past governor, you will need to submit a new application and supporting documents.

If you submitted a pardon application after January 2019 to Governor Newsom, you can supplement your application by sending new information to pardons@gov.ca.gov or mail it to Office of the Governor, Attn: Legal Affairs/Parole and Clemency, 1021 O Street, Sacramento, CA 95814.

If you submitted a pardon application through the Certificate of Rehabilitation process before January 2019 and you would like Governor Newsom to consider your application, you can reapply without sending in a new application by submitting a re-application request. With a re-application request, you do not need to resubmit previously submitted documents but can continue to send in new documents.

How can I apply for a pardon?

There are two ways you can apply for a pardon – a Certificate of Rehabilitation (COR) or a direct pardon. Most people who are granted pardons went through the COR process. If you do not qualify for a COR or cannot wait because you may be deported, you can request a direct pardon and explain why you cannot seek a COR.

Certificate of Rehabilitation (COR)

A COR is a court order declaring that a person convicted of a crime is now rehabilitated. You apply for a COR in the Superior Court in the county in California where you currently reside or the county where you were convicted. Not everyone qualifies to apply for a COR.

You must meet all of these requirements to apply for a Certificate of Rehabilitation:

1. Currently reside in California and have resided here for at least the last five years.
2. Have one of the following convictions and sentences:
 - A felony² conviction and sentenced to a California state prison or youth authority; or
 - A felony conviction and sentenced to probation and had that conviction expunged; or
 - A misdemeanor sex offense listed in Penal Code § 290 and had that conviction expunged.
3. Have completed probation or parole. You will need to wait an additional number of years after completing probation, parole, or your release from custody. The length of time varies from 7 to 10 years depending on your conviction. See Penal Code § 4852.03 for how long you must wait. Check with an attorney if you are not sure if you qualify.

An application for a COR can usually be obtained from the court clerk, probation department, or public defender's office. Once a petition is filed, the district attorney or probation may conduct an investigation. The court will schedule a hearing.

If the court issues a COR, the certificate is forwarded to the Governor's office and automatically becomes an application for a pardon. You should receive a letter confirming that the COR was forwarded. The Governor's receipt of a COR does not guarantee that a pardon will be granted.

² If you have a misdemeanor conviction for a non-sex offense or your felony conviction was reduced to a misdemeanor under PC 17(b), you do not qualify for a Certificate of Rehabilitation. You can still apply for a direct pardon.

Direct Pardon Applications

If you do not qualify for a Certificate of Rehabilitation or are in danger of deportation in the near future and cannot wait for the COR process, you can apply for a direct pardon from the Governor. If there is an urgent need for a pardon, such as a pending deportation, highlight the urgency on the application.

To apply for a direct pardon, you need to submit an application form and supporting documents to the Governor. You will also need to send a Notice of Intent to Apply for Clemency to the District Attorney for each county where you are seeking a pardon. You will need to sign a statement at the end of the application that you sent a copy to the District Attorney. You can also send a copy of the application and supporting documents to the District Attorney if you wish.

Copies of the application form and Notice of Intent are attached to this guide. They are also available online at <https://www.gov.ca.gov/pardons/>. We will go through how to answer each question and the documents you should include.

How do I fill out the application?

The application has five main questions. Below are suggestions on how to answer each question on the application form. Most of your answers will not fit in the space provided. You can provide your answers on separate pages.

Question 1

1. Conviction Summary (Note: The Governor's Office will review a complete copy of your criminal history report.)

List conviction(s) for which you are requesting a pardon.
Crime(s):	Date(s) of conviction:	County of conviction(s):	Sentence(s):

List all prior conviction(s) in California, any other state or country, or in federal court:
Crime(s):	Date(s) of conviction:	Location of conviction(s):	Sentence(s):

For the bottom table, you need to list all convictions even if you are not seeking a pardon for that conviction or the conviction was expunged. The Governor's office will conduct a background check and look at all criminal convictions.

If you are not sure about the detail of your convictions, there are three ways that you can look up this information:

1. County records: If you know which counties your convictions are in, you can contact the criminal court in that county and request the records. Some counties allow you to look up information online for a fee. Other counties require you to request the records in person or in writing. If you have a federal conviction, you can look up the case online using the PACER system - <https://www.pacer.gov/>
2. California Live Scan: You can also request your California criminal history through the Live Scan process. You will need to go to an in-person location to have your fingerprints taken electronically. You will receive a list of all of your California convictions in the mail. This will not include federal or out-of-state convictions. A list of Live Scan locations is available at <https://oag.ca.gov/fingerprints/locations>.
3. FBI Background Check: If you are not sure what states your convictions are in or have federal convictions, you can request a nationwide criminal history through the FBI. The process requires you to take ink fingerprints. Some but not all Live Scan locations offer this service. Information on the process is available at <https://www.fbi.gov/services/cjis/identity-history-summary-checks>.

Question 2: Briefly describe the circumstance of the crime(s) for which you are requesting a pardon and attach additional pages as necessary.

How you answer this question will be depend on whether:

1. You take full responsibility for the crime; or
2. You take partial responsibility for the crime but were not the person who caused direct harm; or
3. You maintain your innocence.

We will go through each of these in detail below. In general, obtaining a pardon while maintaining innocence can be challenging but not impossible. If you do take responsibility, you should not try to minimize your mistakes. Instead, you can explain how your life, patterns, major events, experience with abuse, etc. led to your conviction.

1. If you take full responsibility for the crime:

Acknowledge personal responsibility and individual culpability, and describe how you understand the harm you caused and how you feel and show remorse about your actions and choices.

Describe anything about the context of your life at the time that mitigates the crime, for instance:

- if you were young (under the age of 25), discuss how your immaturity played a role

- if you were a victim of abuse (i.e. childhood sexual abuse, domestic violence, sexual violence, sex trafficking, physical violence, gender-based violence)
- if you were suffering from an addiction
- if you experienced neglect in the child welfare system
- if you were homeless, etc.

It is important to frame your contextual information not as an excuse for what you did but rather, in the vein of, “I’m trying to understand how I could have committed the crime.” Share context that helps explain any negative information in your police and prison files, such as any disciplinary infractions. If you received many disciplinaries earlier in your jail and or prison time, show that you have insight into your emotional state and behaviors that led to those incidents, and explain how you changed over time.

2. If you take partial responsibility for the crime but were not the person who caused direct harm:

Describe why you believe that although you were partially responsible, you were assigned too much responsibility for the crime. This can be tricky because you have to do so while acknowledging some personal responsibility and while being diplomatic about any direct criticism of the court’s decision.

3. If you maintain your innocence:

Describe why you maintain your innocence and the circumstances in which you were convicted for the crime. This can be tricky because you have to do so while expressing some degree of personal accountability and while being diplomatic if you are directly criticizing the court’s decision. Decision-makers often penalize people for not taking responsibility for their actions. We understand that this might feel like a contradictory position, but it is important to demonstrate personal accountability if you did have some responsibility for what happened.

It is important to take responsibility for whatever role, if any, you did play in the crime. For instance, you might say, “I’m trying to understand how I could have put myself into a situation where I was implicated in this crime.” or if you had no role in the crime, you can simply state, “I was convicted of _____.”

Question 3: Explain why you are requesting a pardon and attach additional pages as necessary.

You can explain that you need a pardon because you are facing deportation or to restore other rights. If you are applying for a direct pardon, you should explain why you do not qualify for a Certificate of Rehabilitation or why you cannot go through the process because you may be deported soon. Highlight any urgency and attach news articles showing that people are being rounded up for your country.

You can also share your family’s immigration story. If you came here as a refugee or fleeing persecution, provide that background information. You should stress how long you have lived in the United States and your family ties here. You should also explain the emotional and financial hardship that deportation would cause to you and your family. You can explain conditions in the country where you will be deported especially if you fear discrimination or persecution.

Question 4: Provide a brief statement explaining why you should be granted a pardon, and attach additional pages if necessary.

Describe your process of change and rehabilitation since your conviction and release from prison. Describe in detail how you turned your life around. Highlight programs that helped, such as substance/alcohol abuse counseling, faith-based support groups, and classes. Explain insights that you have achieved about your circumstances, behaviors, and patterns, and describe the skills you have developed to respond to personal challenges differently.

Highlight positive things that you did while in prison or since your release in the community, such as community service and work history, and attach supporting documents. The Governor's pardon often mentions these details about people.

Question 5: If you have paid any money or given any gift to anyone to assist in the preparation of this application, list their name, address, and amount paid or given (required by Penal Code section 4807.2).

If you paid a lawyer or anyone else to help you with your application, you need to provide their information here. If an organization is helping you for free, you do not need to list them.

What should I attach to the application?

There are a number of documents that you should attach to your application. Some examples are provided below. You should submit the documents organized into sections.

Support Letters

Letters supporting your pardon are a critical part of your application. Supporters should describe their knowledge of your character and provide reasons why you should stay in the United States and/or the hardships you or family members would suffer if deported. The letters should not minimize your convictions but instead talk about your positive qualities. Sample support letters are included with this guide.

You can ask for support letters from family members, friends, neighbors, landlord, clergy or spiritual leaders, employers, coworkers, and community organizations.

Family Ties

- Copy of Marriage Certificate
- Copy of Children's Birth Certificates

- Letters from Current or Past Employers
- Copies of Income Tax Returns and W-2s. You can request a summary of your tax returns at <https://www.ssa.gov/myaccount/>

Country Conditions

- Evidence of poverty
- Reports of human rights violations
- Evidence that you would face persecution or discrimination

- Participation in Fire Camp
- Attendance at church or other religious/spiritual activities
- Participation in charity events or efforts
- Chronos from COs, supervisors, etc.

If you no longer have a copy of your prison records, you can request a copy of your Central File from the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation by filling out a CDCR Form 7385 available at <https://www.cdcr.ca.gov/bph/bph-forms/>.

If you are still on parole, send the form to:

California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation
Parole Case Records
9160 Cleveland Avenue
Rancho Cucamonga, CA 91730
Fax Number: 909-484-3785

If you are no longer on parole, send the form to:

CDCR – Archive Unit
2015 Aerojet Rd, Suite D
Rancho Cordova, CA 95742
(916) 358-1521 Mainline
(916) 358-1554 Fax

Public Support: One strategy that can be very helpful is asking family members, friends, or organizations to solicit more community support for your pardon. This can take the form of online petitions, individual postcards, and/or support letters — all of which should be addressed and sent to the Governor. The goal here is to bring attention to your application and show community support for your pardon.

You should also contact elected officials to ask them to write letters of support for your pardon. This includes state senators, assembly members, city council members, school board members, and members of Congress.

Where do I send the application?

Applicants for a direct pardon may obtain the application either by accessing the Governor's website at <https://www.gov.ca.gov/pardons/>, or requesting an application through the mail. Upon completing the pardon application, you can email it to pardons@gov.ca.gov or mail it to the following address:

Office of the Governor
Attn: Legal Affairs/Parole and Clemency
1021 O Street, Suite 9000
Sacramento, CA 95814

Remember to also serve a Notice of Intent to Apply for Clemency on the District Attorney's office for the county or counties of conviction. While you only need to send the form to the District Attorney, it may be helpful to also send all of the additional documents so they have a better idea of who you are as a person. You can find their address at <https://www.cdaa.org/district-attorney-roster>. You must also sign the declaration at the end of the application form that you served the District Attorney.

After Submitting the Application

Once you submit your pardon application, you can continue to send in support letters and any other documentation that supports your application.

The Governor's office may send you an application number once they receive your application but you do not need the application number to send in additional documents. You only need to include your name with additional documents.

If selected for further review, applicants may or may not be interviewed by a Board of Parole Hearings (BPH) investigator. It is possible that you will get a call from an investigator asking for additional information. The investigator can either follow up on possible mitigating circumstances identified in the your application to determine individual culpability in the offense, or gather additional information regarding the crime, criminal history, or any other needed clarification of your application.

It is recommended to be prepared and candid as much as possible in an interview because it would be a chance to highlight the person you are today and to speak truth to your rehabilitation, why you are requesting a pardon, and why you believe a pardon should be granted for you.

If an applicant is not interviewed, it does not mean there is a lower chance of being granted a pardon. There have been pardon grants in cases where applicants did not go through a BPH interview process and in cases where applicants who were contacted by an investigator had a short phone call or in-person interview.

Process for People with a Prior Felony

If you have more than one felony conviction, the Governor cannot grant a pardon until you are recommended by the California Supreme Court.³ The application process is the same one that everyone else goes through. The Governor decides which applications are sent to the Supreme Court for review. They are not required to forward all applications to the Supreme Court. Just as with applicants without priors, applicants with priors may or may not be interviewed by a BPH investigator.

³ See California Penal Code § 4802. Multiple felony counts from a single case are treated as one felony. It may be possible to get around this additional hurdle by reducing some of your felonies to misdemeanors. Consult with a criminal law attorney or a free local “clean slate” clinic to determine if a reduction is possible.

SAMPLE SUPPORT LETTER

Office of the Governor
Attn: Legal Affairs/Parole and Clemency
1021 O Street
Sacramento, CA 95814

Dear Governor Newsom:

My name is Laura Le, and I write in support of Sandra Khim's application for a pardon. I have known Sandra for over nine years, and she is such a dear friend to me that I would consider her to be family. I first met Sandra in 2009 at a parents' event held at the middle school that both of our children attended. We chatted that night for hours, and quickly became friends. Early in our friendship, Sandra was already open about her criminal background and how she lived in fear of being deported back to Cambodia.

Sandra's past should not be ignored, but I implore you to take into account all the time that has elapsed. All of us have made mistakes that we wish we could undo. How many of us would want to be held responsible for the worst fifteen minutes of our lives? Sandra holds herself fully accountable for her poor choices, but she and I have discussed at length how she got to that desperate junction in her life. As a scared young woman, Sandra woke up once she was placed behind bars. She had been living her life like it didn't have consequences, but she soon realized that this was because she didn't give herself enough credit, that she didn't value herself enough. I believe her when she says that she wants to change her life and to break the cycle of violence and abuse.

After prison, Sandra immediately distanced herself from her old friends because she knew that they would continue to be a bad influence on her. While working to support herself and her elderly parents, she put herself through school. Sandra also became a mother, and is now proudly raising a beautiful daughter. It's not easy being a single mother, but Sandra takes it all in stride. Whenever other parents in our friend group need help babysitting, she is often the first to volunteer.

Sandra relies on her temple community to keep her strong, and often encourages me to come with her to cultural and volunteer events. Kind and generous, she is a great example of what happens when we give people second chances. Unfortunately, Sandra is now facing deportation to Cambodia, a country that she left as an infant when her parents fled the Khmer Rouge. She does not even speak Khmer, and has no surviving family there. Her home is here with us in the United States. Sandra's thirteen-year-old daughter May needs her mother, and Sandra's parents would not be able to get to their doctors' appointments, pick up groceries, or live in dignity without her daily assistance.

I understand that your office gets many requests for clemency, but I implore you to consider Sandra for a pardon so that her deportation can be prevented. If your office requires further information about Sandra, please do not hesitate to contact me at (510) 555-9382 or LauraLe@gmail.com.

Thank you for your time.

Sincerely yours,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'Laura Le', with a long horizontal line extending to the right.
